DE WET HEADED OFF.

He Made an Attempt to Move Toward Bethlehem.

Belgicland West Filled With Small Parties of Boers, Who Are Working Southward to Prieska.

London, Jan. 3.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener:

"De Wet tried to move toward Bethlehem, but he was headed off by Picher, and retreated toward Lindley or Reitz.

"One hundred and thirty Boer horses have been captured near Thaba N'Chu.

"Williams engaged the Boers south-east of Middleburg, Cape Colony, and the British now occupy Great Reinet." Cape Town, Jan. 3.—The British battle ship Monarch will land guns as a precautionary measure. The situation is undoubtedly serious.

It is true that the Dutch have not joined the invaders in any considerable numbers, but a lack of arms is believed to be the true reason for it. In many places horses are freely offered and information readily supplied to the Boers. The early proclamation of martial law in the Cape Town division is expected. This division does not include Cape Town itself. The latest reports show the situation to be generally as follows: Kuruman, if still uninvested, probably soon will be. Griqualand West is filled with small parties of Boers who are working southward toward Prieska for the purpose of co-operating with or supporting Commandant Hertzog, whose advanced parties are in the neighborhood of Frazersburg.

The Boers are close to Graaf Reinet, where of late the Dutch have given many demonstrations of extreme sympathy. In the eastern part of the colony the advance guard of the Boers is close to Maraisburg, about 25 miles northeast of Cradock. The general opinion here is that the position is not properly appreciated in England.

The Worcester conference excited the Dutch throughout the colony. Many old residents, who are by no means alarmists, regard a general uprising of the Dutch as quite likely. Cape Town, Jan. 3.—The invaders have reached Glenharby, a few miles north of Graaf Reinet, in the heart of the disaffected portion of the colony.

MARACAIBO DISTRICT.

A Serious Revolution Breaks Out—Rebels Defeated and Twenty Leaders Arrested.

San Juan de Porto Rico, Jan. 3.—Passengers who arrived here Wednesday on the Red "D" line steamer Philadelphia from La Guayra, December 30, say a serious revolution has broken out in the Maracaibo district of Venezuela. They add that the government troops have defeated the rebels and arrested 20 of the leaders. Another rising is reported to have occurred in the vicinity of the Orinoco. The United States auxiliary cruiser Scorpion left here Tuesday to join the Hartford at La Guayra.

GEORGIA LYNCHING.

Negro Man Shot to Death By a Mob of His Own Color For Assaulting a Little Girl.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 3.—A special from Quitman, Ga., says: A Negro whose name can not be learned was lynched by a mob of his own color Wednesday night, nine miles north of Quitman, for assaulting a small Negro girl. Bailiff Pace had the Negro in charge and was making his way here. When about to board a train near Kennedy a mob of Negroes who were on the train took the prisoner and shot him, with no attempt to conceal their crime.

ALABAMA LYNCHING.

Louis McAdams, Colored, Hanged to a Tree and His Body Riddled With Bullets By a Mob.

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 3.—A special from Wilsonville, Ala., says: Louis McAdams, a Negro who cut and seriously injured J. M. Ray at this place Christmas eve, and who was arrested in Childersburg Tuesday, was taken from the officers by a mob of 100 men Wednesday and hanged to a tree four miles from this place. As the Negro's body swung in the air the contents of 50 shotguns and rifles were emptied into it. As every man wore a mask, there is no clue as to the identity of the lynchers.

Chief Engineer Killed.

London, Jan. 2.—The Spanish steamer Oleta, from Genoa, December 10, for New Orleans, has arrived at La Palmas, having burst the main steam pipes. The chief engineer was killed by the explosion. She will be surveyed.

Marcus Daly's Daughter Weds.

New York, Jan. 3.—Miss Margaret Daly, the eldest daughter of the late Marcus Daly, of Montana, was very quietly wedded at noon Wednesday to H. Carroll Brown, of Baltimore, at the home of the bride's mother on Fifth avenue.

Social Season Open.

Washington, Jan. 3.—The social season of the new year at the white house was opened Wednesday night when President and Mrs. McKinley gave a dinner in honor of the cabinet and their ladies.

PAT CROWE ESCAPED.

His Friends Are Reported to Be Spiriting Him to the Hole-in-the-Wall Country, Wyoming.

Chadron, Neb., Jan. 3.—It was reported Wednesday afternoon that the two officers who were reported to have captured Pat Crowe, the abductor of young Eddie Cudahy, of Omaha, while endeavoring to make good his escape across the Pine River country Tuesday, were frustrated by Crowe's friends and sympathizers, many of whom live near the agency.

Crowe's friends are said to be spiriting him away to the Hole in the Wall country in Wyoming, where he is to join an old time friend and cattleman.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 3.—Edward A. Cudahy, jr., when asked Wednesday to identify J. J. Crowe as one of the men who had kidnapped him, said:

"I never saw that man before. He is not the man who stood guard over me, and if he had anything at all to do with the kidnapping, I did not see him."

Crowe was taken before Judge Learn for a hearing, and as no charge was preferred the court dismissed the case. Crowe was arrested Tuesday as a suspect.

VENEZUELAN TROUBLE.

A Stay of Proceedings Over the Conflicting Asphalt Concessions at Present.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Minister Loomis, at Caracas, has advised the state department that the impending trouble over the conflicting asphalt concessions has been averted for the present. There are no details in the minister's dispatch, but it is gathered that he has induced the Venezuelan authorities to suspend arbitrary action looking toward the ejectment of some of the concessionaries until there can be had a calm, judicial determination of the merits of the conflicting claims.

It is probable that the arrival of the gunboat Scorpion at La Guayra has been a potent influence in bringing about this present stay of proceedings.

PUBLIC DEBT STATEMENT.

During the Month of December There Was a Decrease of $1,983,565.

Washington, Jan. 3.—The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business December 31, 1900, the national debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $1,099,191,310, a decrease for the month of $1,983,565. The debt is recapitulated as follows: Interest-bearing debt, $1,001,499,770; debt on which interest has ceased since maturity, $2,634,070; debt bearing no interest, $385,144,806; total, $1,389,298,646. This amount, however, does not include $754,012,379 in certificates and treasury notes outstanding, which are offset by an equal amount of cash on hand.

FINANCIAL.

Comparative Statement of the Receipts and Expenditures of the United States Government.

Washington, Jan. 3.—The comparative statement of the receipts and expenditures of the United States, issued by the treasury department on Wednesday, shows for the month of December, 1900, the total receipts were $46,846,508, an increase, as compared with December, 1899, of $87,404. During the last six months the receipts amounted to $291,841,861, against $284,793,494 for the corresponding period last year.

The expenditures during the last six months aggregated $273,094,155, against $263,766,560 for the corresponding period in 1899.

The net surplus during the last six months was $18,747,705.

UNITED STATES MINTS.

Total Coinage During the Past Year Was $137,099,401, of Which $99,272,942 Was Gold.

Washington, Jan. 3.—The yearly coinage statement of the director of the mint shows that the total coinage of the mints of the United States was $137,099,401, as follows: Gold $99,272,942; silver, $36,295,321; minor coins, $2,031,137. Of the silver coined $24,960,912 was in standard silver dollars. The December coinage amounted to $7,758,580, of which $4,576,697 was gold, $2,880,555 silver and $301,328 minor coins.

The Transport Grant Arrives.

Washington, Jan. 1.—The quarter-master general is informed that the transport Grant was sighted off the port of San Francisco Monday afternoon. She carries the remains of 398 officers, soldiers and civil employees of the war department who died in Hawaii, the Philippines and China, including those of Lieut. Barber, the president's nephew.

Shy Some $12,000.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Cashier Ben Brainard, of the Marine bank, Springfield, Ill., treasurer of the state board of agriculture and a prominent politician, is said to have resigned, investigation of his books having shown an apparent shortage of $12,000.

Consul Wildman's Leave of Absence.

Washington, Jan. 3.—United States Consul Wildman, at Hong-Kong, has been granted leave of absence and will return to the United States immediately for the benefit of his health.

MONROE DOCTRINE.

Cuban Constitutional Convention Considering Its Acceptance.

Cuba Will Be Put on a War Footing to Help the United States in Case Such Assistance Is Needed.

Havana, Jan. 3.—The Cuban constitutional convention is considering two promulgations of the future relations between Cuba and the United States. One of these affirms, in the first place, an acceptance of the Monroe doctrine and the establishment of friendly relations with all nations, together with a resolution to proceed in all cases in complete accord with the United States. In the second place it proposes to put at the disposal of the United States a portion of the shore of any bay on the north coast and of two bays on the south coast for naval stations, together with concessions sufficient in extent for the purposes of defense and sanitation.

In the third place, it declares that Cuba will place herself on a war footing to help the United States in case such assistance should be needed; while a fourth proviso is an amplification of the first, second and third. The other promulgation contemplates:

1. That the convention is vested with authority only to convene.

2. Not having been granted legislative functions, the convention can not arrange the basis of future relations.

3. Nevertheless, should Washington desire such a discussion, the convention is willing to discuss and agree upon an arrangement of mutual relations.

4. The aspirations of the convention are merely to consolidate the country for reconstruction. Its energies are directed toward supporting the avowed policy of the United States to which Cuba is bound by indestructible ties of gratitude, said policy being based upon the unequivocal preservation of liberty and independence throughout the American continent.

The former promulgation embodies the desires of delegates friendly to the United States. The latter is a counter-check to the extremists. It is considered that the former is likely to carry.

TRICHINOSIS.

An Entire Family at New Sweden, Minn., Stricken—Father and Daughter Dead.

St. Peter, Minn., Jan. 3.—An entire family named Forbecook, living in the town of New Sweden, Nicollet county, are said to be stricken with trichinosis. Two of them, the father and a daughter, are already dead, and the physicians are said to have abandoned all hope of saving the surviving members. The disease is said to have been contracted through the eating of smoked sausage which had not been cooked.

Jeffries Will Not Fight.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—The latest barrier to be thrown in the way of the promoters of the Jeffries-Ruhlin fight in Cincinnati came to light here Wednesday, when a prominent local labor leader who has an intimate acquaintance with Champion Jeffries received a telegram stating that under no conditions would he fight in a building which was boycotted by the laboring men.

"Not until all difficulties with the laboring men have been fixed up will I fight at Saengerfest hall in Cincinnati," read the champion's wire.

Lord Roberts at Cowes.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Jan. 3.—When Lord Roberts reached Osborne house he found that the queen was out driving and he conversed with several of the princesses while waiting for her return. The audience lasted a quarter of an hour. Lord Roberts was then taken to Southampton by the royal yacht Alberta and went on board the Canada, where he spent the night.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Jan. 3.—The queen bestowed an earldom on Lord Roberts, with a special remainder for his daughters. He was also made a Knight of the Garter.

James Richards Dead.

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 3.—James Richards, aged 82, died here Wednesday. He was a native of Massachusetts, but moved to Cleveland, O., in 1840. He was identified with the "underground railroad" by which escaping slaves were cared for and deported to Canada. Mr. Richards once owned a farm on the site of what is now Wade park, in the city of Cleveland.

Will Manage the Duluth Team.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Tim Donahue, catcher of the Chicago baseball club, Wednesday accepted an offer to manage the Duluth team of the proposed Northwestern league.

Will Not Enter the Racing Field.

Belvidere, Kan., Jan. 3.—Frank Kockefeller, who owns a 14,000 acre ranch near here, denies that he is about to breed fine horses or to enter the racing field. He will devote himself to raising high grade range cattle.

A Bill Against Kidnaping.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 3.—Senator Ransom, of Omaha, introduced in the state senate Wednesday a bill to make kidnaping under certain conditions punishable by death. It provides for three grades of punishment.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

The Noted Politician, Author and Sage Expired After a Short Illness Wednesday Morning.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 3.—Ignatius Donnelly, politician, author, sage, aged 70, died at 12:03 Wednesday morning. The eminent Minneapolisian was taken suddenly ill Tuesday night while visiting at the house of his father-in-law, Barton Hanson, 3022 Twenty-eighth avenue South. From the first Mr. Donnelly sank steadily and soon became unconscious. The doctor pronounced it heart failure and stated early in the evening that there was little chance of the patient's recovery. Later Mr. Donnelly passed away surrounded by a number of his relatives.

From the first they had understood that he could not live, as he was well advanced in years, being nearly 70 years of age, and it was a sorrowful little group that watched by the bedside as the man whose name has brought honor to the state of Minnesota lay gasping out the last faint spark of life. He died at 12:03 o'clock in the morning without regaining consciousness.

Ignatius Donnelly, known as "The Sage of Hininger," has been conspicuous in the political and literary field for many years. Mr. Donnelly came to Minnesota 35 years ago, and since that time had been a member of both houses of the state legislature and represented his district in congress.

NEW YEARS IN PEKING.

It Was Celebrated on an Elaborate Scale By the Foreigners in the City.

Peking, Jan. 2.—The advent of the New Year and the new century was celebrated in Peking on an elaborate scale. The discharge of numerous guns at midnight created a scare and many troops were sent to discover whether the city had been attacked or whether it was a Boxer rising.

Gen. Chaffee held his reception in the morning and Mr. Conger received in the afternoon.

A feature which caused considerable comment was a review of the British troops in honor of Queen Victoria and of Australian federation, to which all the nations were invited to send representatives.

The French were conspicuous by their absence, not a single Frenchman being present at the review.

ONLY FOR A VISIT.

Mrs. Peak Did Not Kidnap the Two Children of Her Divorced Husband.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 2.—State Senator J. Walter Peak, of this city, denied emphatically the story sent out from Lexington, Ky., Monday night charging the wife with kidnapping the two children of her divorced husband and bringing them to this city. He states that Mrs. Peak arrived here last Saturday from Lexington, where she had been visiting, and brought the children with her, but only for a visit and not with any intention of detaining them. He adds that the children have visited his wife here before, and that their guardian has never objected to it. The children are here now for a month's visit.

THE DUKE OF YORK.

Promoted From Captain to the Rank of Rear Admiral Over the Heads of 66 Senior Captains.

London, Jan. 2.—The promotion of the duke of York from the rank of captain to that of rear admiral, as a preliminary to his visit to Australia and Canada, gives universal satisfaction, and the fact that he thus passes over the heads of 66 senior captains will not in the slightest degree detract from his universal popularity in the navy. Since the duke of Edinburgh succeeded to the duchy of Saxe-Coburg the British navy has lacked the distinction of a princely flag officer. The duke of York visited Australia with his brother as a cadet 20 years ago.

Committed Suicide.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 1.—A private dispatch received in Atlanta Monday from New York city said that Edward G. Coffman, the alleged absconding secretary and treasurer of the Southern Agricultural Co. and manager of the Atlanta handle works, committed suicide in New York Monday night. These companies were owned largely by Milwaukee, and the president of the agricultural company, Landauer, killed himself in Atlanta about six months ago.

New Life Saving District.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 2.—A new life saving district, including the sea waters of Alaska, Washington and Oregon, has been created with Capt. W. H. Roberts, of San Francisco, superintendent. It is said that there will also be a station at Nome before many months.

An Appeal For Aid.

London, Jan. 1.—The princess of Wales has written to the newspapers, appealing for further funds for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families association, of which she is president, to maintain the families of the men engaged in the war.

Asks $50,000 Damages.

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 1.—Frank Hodges, an actor, has begun suit against Ed P. Carpenter, a mining man of Republic, asking $50,000 for the allegation of his wife's attentions.

CLOSENESS PERSONIFIED.

Dreamed He Had to Pay a Dollar for a Cub and Was Afraid to Go to Sleep Again.

There's a good story told of a young fellow here noted for his closeness. He went to spend the night with a friend. During the entire night he betrayed much restlessness, which kept the host wide awake, and finally the slumberer betrayed signs of violent emotion. "He's going to have a nightmare," said the friend, "but he always grumbles so when you wake him up that I hate to disturb him." He waited while longer, sitting up in bed staring at the miserable sleeper, and, finally becoming alarmed, he roused him. He sprang up in bed, glared wildly around and said: "Where am I? I don't see the storm!" "Why, here in my room," said his host, soothingly; "you remember you stayed all night with me? I beg your pardon for waking you up, but you carried on so I had to." "Beg your pardon," gasped the guest. "I shall never be grateful enough to you. I dreamed I was out with Miss Bud and a terrible storm came up, and my shoes were new, and I was just ordering a coupe for two when you roused me. Old boy, you have saved me a dollar."

And the host says he was actually afraid to go to sleep again that night for fear the coupe would come, says the Louisville Times.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

MEDICAL EXAMINER

On the U. S. Treasury Recommends Peruna.

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan, Medical Examiner of U. S. Treasury Department, graduate of Columbia College, and who served three years at West Point, has the following to say of Peruna:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from your wonderful remedy. One short month has brought forth a vast change and I now consider myself a well man after months of suffering. Fellow sufferers, Peruna will cure you."

Catarrh is a systemic disease curable only by systematic treatment. A remedy that cures catarrh must aim directly at the depressed nerve centers. This is what Peruna does. Peruna immediately invigorates the nerve centers which give vitality to the mucous membranes. Then catarrh disappears. Then catarrh is permanently cured. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Peruna is not a guess nor an experiment—it is an absolute scientific certainty. Peruna has no substitutes—no rivals. Insist upon having Peruna.

A free book written by Dr. Hartman, on the subject of catarrh in its different phases and stages, will be sent free to any address by the Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

SEALED ORDERS.

Out she swung from her moorings,
And over the harbor bar,
As the moon was slowly rising,
She faded from sight and afar,
And we traced her gleaming canvas
By the twinkling evening star.

None knew the port she sailed for,
Nor whether her course would be,
Her future fate was shrouded
In silence and mystery.
She was sailing "under sealed orders"
To be opened out at sea.

Some souls, cut off from moorings,
Go drifting into the night,
Darkness before and around them,
With scarce a glimmer of light;
They are acting "under sealed orders"
And sailing by faith, not sight.

Keeping the line of duty
Through good and evil report,
They shall ride the storms out safely,
Be the passage long or short;
For the ship that carries God's orders
Shall anchor at last in port.

CHAPTER XI.

Mrs. Nolan crept into her own room and went to bed. She had her quota of inborn superstition, and the idea of associating such an inevitable thing as death with her misdeeds went against her inclination.

"I feel as if she really did drown herself," she said to her disturbed inner-self, "and that her dripping corpse is in there now unknown to anyone but myself."

She was unable to sleep at all. The ship continued to roll badly and now and then waves which raced one another across the deep struck the vessel broadside with sufficient force to break in the portholes. Indeed, Mrs. Nolan's mind was too active with the part she had played, and with conjuring up possible consequences, to give itself up to unconsciousness. At three o'clock she rose and crept into the adjoining room and bent over her accomplice. To her astonishment this beautiful creature was sleeping as soundly and peacefully as an infant.

"The idea of her taking it so easily and me nearly out of my head is ridiculous," Mrs. Nolan resentfully argued. "I'll go back and sleep. What's the use to worry? She's running the risk."

But she lay with her eyes open till the day broke, then as the sun rose in a cloudless sky she looked from the window. The gale was over, but the waves were still high and looked like hills capped with snow. It was the grandest sight Mrs. Nolan had ever beheld, but she could have desired it less so. Its majesty reminded her of the omnipotence of God against whose laws she had set herself. Her watch told her it was yet half an hour before the time her companion usually awoke, yet Mrs. Nolan had already borne the mental weight of what had taken place as long as she intended. She wanted company, so she shook Mrs. Goddard gently. This much-indulged woman was in the habit of entering the waking state by a series of audible yawns and little cries and these unconscious outbursts Mrs. Nolan had to stifle by holding her hand over their source. Finally Mrs. Goddard opened her eyes and ceased to squirm about.

"It's too early," she asserted, drowsily. "It is still dark."

"Don't talk above a whisper," cautioned Mrs. Nolan. "It's dark because the curtains are down. It's really a bright day."

"What time is it?"

"Eight o'clock."

When Mrs. Goddard had risen and dressed, and they had smoothed out her bed till it had the appearance of not having been used, she took her place in the closet.

"Now," she said, "fix me, and then ring for your breakfast. I hate to sit so long cramped up here. To gain time, perhaps it would be a good idea to order your breakfast and have the stewardess arrange the room at once. Give her a tip—ten dollars will not be too little, or too large; she may be thinking, now that I am overboard, that she won't get her fee. The money will put her in a good humor; it will make her respect you, and then you must request her to see that you are left alone."

The stewardess brought up Mrs. Nolan's breakfast on a tray. Her face really did wear a certain look of discontent as she put the things on the table.

"Here is some money for you," said Mrs. Nolan. "While it is true that Mrs. Goddard employed me as a companion, we are more like friends, and if she were alive she would have given that much to you, I am sure."

The woman's face lighted up as she unfolded the banknote.

"Thank you, madam," she said. "It was awful, wasn't it?"

"I was unable to sleep last night on account of it," said Mrs. Nolan, pouring her coffee. "The rooms need very little attention. Please leave the way and see that I am not disturbed any more than possible."

"I will, madam, thank you very much." And in a few minutes her work was finished and she withdrew.

Then the closet was opened and Mrs. Goddard came out.

"I only want a roll and a cup of coffee," she said, in a whisper.

When they had both finished breakfast, Mrs. Goddard coiled herself up in bed and began to read a novel. About 11 o'clock there was a rap at the door. Mrs. Nolan opened it about an inch. It was the stewardess to say that the captain would like to see her when it was convenient.

"Tell him I'll come at once," said Mrs. Nolan, and she turned back into the room, closing the door.

"You had better go right on," said Mrs. Goddard, with a white set face. "He only wants the particulars about me. Tell him a straight tale. I shall not stay in the closet."

"But the risk!" protested the more cautious woman.

"Oh, hang the risk!" said Mrs. Goddard, coarsely.

"I won't go a step unless you stay in the closet."

"Very well, I am glad you are so careful, after all. My Lord, it makes me shiver to think of our being caught."

"I think, just to disarm suspicion, I'd better leave the stateroom door wide open. As we have both the closet keys it would be safe."

"I told you you had a better head than I have," said Mrs. Goddard from her seat in the closet; "that's a splendid idea."

Fifteen minutes later Mrs. Nolan passed along the crowded deck under the gaze of a hundred pairs of curious eyes and returned to her stateroom.

"What did you tell him?" questioned Mrs. Goddard, as she came out blinking in the light.

"I answered every question he put to me," said Mrs. Nolan. "He seemed thoroughly satisfied. There was one point that was hard to get around. He had found out from the purser that you had not put any money in the safe and asked what had become of your funds."

"Great God! I never thought of that. What did you say?"

"I told him your purse with a few dollars only was here in my possession, but that you were owing me a large amount and that I thought I ought to be allowed to have it."

"Ah, first rate!"

"Then he looked at the second officer and said: 'How much is in the purse?'"

"I told him that I thought there was about $50. Then he and the officer exchanged looks again and the captain said: 'Is it likely, do you think, that a lady of Mrs. Goddard's position would make a voyage to Europe on so small an amount?'"

"Ah!" Our female Quixote was all of a quiver. "What did you say to that, Lucy?"

"I told him that you had told me you had a sight draft on a London bank which you intended to get cashed as soon as we landed."

"What on earth did you say that for?" gasped Mrs. Goddard.

Mrs. Nolan smiled significantly. "I told him you always wore it and your jewels in a strong belt round your waist."

Mrs. Goddard held her breath for a moment, then:

"Did it go down?" She used slang only when great excitement drew about her the habits of her early life. "Yes, down with you—to the bottom of the sea," said Mrs. Nolan, smiling grimly.

The next day passed agreeably enough but for the fact that on a diet of cold canned meats, biscuits and wine Mrs. Goddard chafed under the monotonous restraint of the darkened room, and Mrs. Nolan's absence, for this woman, as a part of her role, now took walks by herself on those parts of the deck not frequented by the other passengers, and went down for her meals. The swell of the sea had degenerated into mere ripples, and not a white cap was visible. The weather was ideal. The woman who had proffered her services to Mrs. Nolan on the night of the supposed accident approached during one of these walks and gave her a piece of information which she immediately bore to the impatient recluse.

"We are going to arrive at Liverpool to-night," she explained when she reached Mrs. Goddard's side. "We will get in about midnight and lay at anchor till next morning. All the salon passengers will go ashore on the tender at eight o'clock in the morning. A tender for the second-cabin passengers will leave just before day. Jeanne, how on earth do you intend to get ashore unnoticed?"

The woman to whom this question was addressed seemed to be lost in crafty meditation. Suddenly it seemed to occur to her that she had not answered and she said:

"My first intention was to stay in my hiding-place until the ship was in the dock, and it was the most risky part of the entire undertaking, but, Lucy, I am going to go ashore with the second cabin passengers. It will still be dark, and if I am well veiled, they will not know me in the rush that always takes place at such a time. Yes, I shall at all events try that."

"But where shall I meet you?" asked Mrs. Nolan, frightened by the precariousness of the undertaking.

"I shall go to the Hamilton hotel, and wait for you there. You'd better go to another, and when you feel that you are not observed go out for a walk and join me. I shall register as Mrs. Charles Gray, of Toronto, Canada. When we meet then we shall go on to London together. You know you will have to look after the passing of my luggage through the custom house officers. Tell them you are going straight back to America and will deliver the things to Mr. Goddard. That explanation ought to be sufficient."

The next morning at the hour mentioned Mrs. Goddard was ready for her bold dash for what she called "liberty." She wore a simple black dress and a rather long black veil. Mrs. Nolan had bravely reconnoitered for her; she had gone down at the first bump of the tender against the side of the ship and found the upper decks clear and the lower one a chaos of struggling second-class passengers anxious to get ashore. Mrs. Nolan returned with an air of great relief.

"You'll have no trouble I honestly believe," she declared. "The place is badly lighted and they will drive the people on the tender like sheep. Go right on, take the first flight of stairs to the right and you will be swallowed up in the gang in a minute."

This opinion was well grounded. Mrs. Goddard crossed the deck, descended the steps in question and found herself in a throng of passengers with eyes only for the little boat ahead of them. Our adventurer was soon on the tender, and took the most remote seat she could find in the stern of the boat. It soon began to move.

The lights of Liverpool lay along the shore half a mile distant. The black hull of the Cleopatra loomed overhead like a threatening cloud. Mrs. Goddard held her satchel tightly in her lap. It seemed such a short distance and yet the little boat seemed only to creep. She drew the foggy air deep into her lungs. It seemed so sweet after her close confinement. She would feel that she had earned the right to her freedom when she got it. After awhile, through the gray light of coming dawn, she began to discern the buildings of the city.

A little later the tender was scraping against the piles of the wharf. As she went ashore, Mrs. Goddard saw that two or three sleepy custom officers were hurriedly passing the hand-luggage without examination. It was evident that only the trunks would have to bear close scrutiny. One of the officers caught her arm and turned her round, but when he saw how small her bag was, he gruffly begged her pardon and she passed on out of the throng into the cold, deserted streets of the sleeping city.

"The dead is alive," she muttered, "and very much alive!"

Without much trouble she found the Hamilton house, and "Mrs. Charles Gray" was soon in a big comfortable room.

"Now, if Lucy only passes the custom officers safely there will not be one single thing to bother me," she said. "And what is to hinder her?"

But as the morning passed and her companion did not appear, her elation changed to anxiety. What could have delayed the woman? Surely something had arisen, even at this late hour, to rouse suspicion. Mrs. Goddard walked the floor like a caged beast. Noon came and passed, and the afternoon dragged itself along at a snail's pace. She was afraid to go out in the street. For aught she knew the police, having arrested her accomplice, was now turning Liverpool upside down to find trace of her. The first shadows of night fall were like palpable substances which rasped a brain now inflamed with fears and direful imaginings.

WHAT COULD HAVE DELAYED THE WOMAN?

"Exposure!" seemed to be written in letters of fire on the unlighted walls of her chamber. "Suicide!" was the next word she saw, but she brushed it aside. She would not even think of such a step. Even after this game was played, and had entertained the victims of the nine-day sensation habit, there would yet be other fields for the exercise of her fruitful brain. The world had always seemed so large to her—so full of resources.

At ten o'clock she heard some one coming up the stairs. She weighed the tread, wondering if it was a policeman's. No, it was too light for that. It was a woman's. Opening the door, she saw Mrs. Nolan standing before her in the ill-lighted corridor. She drew her in, her fears completely dominating her speech.

"I know you are angry, but I could not help it," began Mrs. Nolan in a harsh undertone.

"What was it?" demanded Mrs. Goddard. "Don't keep me waiting."

"It was a lot of things. I did my best, but the custom officers would not let me have your trunks."

"Is that all?"

"No, they held me there for several hours asking all manner of questions about you and making me swear to statements. I swore enough lies to draw a pension from the kingdom of Hell for the rest of my life. It was all about the ownership of the contents of the trunks and which were your things and which mine."

"Then they did not suspect us of—?"

"No, it was only about the things. Then after I had managed to get possession of my trunks, by showing my name on them, I slipped away and got a cab that took me to the Portland house. I thought I would be free, but the police officers kept calling to make other inquiries and get me to make other affidavits about the color of your hair, your age, your residence, the name of your husband, and what not. Then they had no sooner given me a breathing spell than the reporters and foreign correspondents began to troop in."

"Reporters?" Mrs. Goddard pronounced the word as if she were learning to speak English.

"Yes, you don't mean to say you haven't seen the afternoon papers?" Mrs. Nolan drew three damp ones from her cloak pocket. "I can't imagine what you have been doing all day. They have been yelling your name all over Liverpool."

"I thought it would get into print, of course," said Mrs. Goddard. She had calmed down considerably and now set herself to the task before her. "Of course, I can't go without clothes," she murmured, reflectively, "and let those stupid limbs of the law ship every rag I have back to the major. It would upset him awfully! Now, let me think."

CATCHING LIONS.

Natives of the Kalahari Country in Africa Seize Them by the Tail.

A Mr. Freeman, who visited South Africa in the first half of the century, was able to gather much information about life and sport in that country. He gives his authority for the most singular mode of attack upon the lion, says Youth's Companion.

Mr. Lemue, who formerly resided at Motito, and is familiar with the Kalahari country, assured me that the remarkable accounts sometimes circulated as to the people of that part of Africa catching lions by the tail, and of which, I confess, I was very incredulous, were perfectly true. He well knows that the method prevailed, and was certainly not uncommon among the people.

Lions would sometimes become extremely dangerous. Having become accustomed to human flesh, they would not willingly eat anything else. When a neighborhood became infested, the men would determine on the measures to be adopted to rid themselves of the nuisance. Then, forming themselves into a band, they would proceed in search of their royal foe.

As the men stood close by one another, the lion would make a spring on some one of the party—every man, of course, hoping that he might escape the attack—when instantly others would dash forward and seize his tail close to the body, lifting him up with all their might. Thus they not only astonished the animal and took him absolutely off his guard, but they rendered his efforts powerless for the moment. Other men closed in with their spears, and pierced the monster through and through.

All this was done, not for the exciting pleasure of a lion-hunt nor as an exhibition of prowess, but to rid the neighborhood of the villages of a dreadful enemy, and to save the men themselves from becoming in their turn the breakfast or the supper of this monarch of the desert.

CHARLES DICKENS' PRESENT.

How a Little Girl's Troubles Were Changed to Happiness by the "Kind Gentleman."

Charles Dickens was always very fond of children. One day he was walking in the neighborhood of God's Hill, not long after he had acquired his property there, when he suddenly ran into a little girl wheeling a doll's perambulator. In an instant the tiny vehicle upset, the dolls being thrown out, says the Detroit Free Press.

It was a bad accident as far as they were concerned, for wax heads and limbs are not calculated to stand much hard usage. The little maid burst into tears, and, much to the novelist's sorrow, refused to be comforted.

"Then come home with me," Dickens whispered soothingly, "and we'll see if we can't find some grand waxen lady in silks and satins for you."

So back to the big house the two went, and sure enough, up in the children's nursery he managed to discover a few prettily dressed dolls. With these safely tucked in her perambulator the little girl trotted off.

But it is in the sequel that the best part of the story lies. The child's heart was set on making some return for this kindness, so her parents, who had not the faintest suspicion of her friend's personality, took her to town to choose something. Her choice fell eventually upon a gorgeously bound book.

When Dickens the next day undid the parcel his small visitor brought him he was surprised and delighted to see a copy of "David Copperfield."

Not until many years later, when they met again in society, did the little girl learn who the "kind gentleman" was.

The Main Question.

A certain learned professor was recently invited to lecture in an English village, and talked completely over the heads of his bucolic audience. At the close of his lecture he dropped his lofty style and blandly remarked: "And now, friends, in conclusion, allow me to say that if anyone has a question to ask I will do my best to answer him." It was a very old villager in the back seat who slowly rose to his feet and asked the first and only question: "Aw'd be vurry mich obleeged, measter," he remarked, "if ye'd jest tell us wot on airth it is that ye've been preaching about."—Tit-Bits.

He Didn't Talk Shop.

A story is told of an Irish lunatic who believed himself to be the Deity. What is known as "a woman of an inquiring nature" visited the asylum and asked him if he knew all things. He answered: "Yes, madam; I know all that has happened, is happening and will happen." "Then tell me," said the visitor, "shall I be saved or damned?" To her the lunatic, with amazing dignity, said: "Madam, I never talk shop."—London Mail.

Yours to Command, (2t) Cook Grocery Co.

Bryan's Paper.

Mrs. Bryan is to be the associate of Mr. Bryan in the editing of "The Commoner." This fact was made known by a friend of the family, who says that Mrs. Bryan will conduct a department for women in the new weekly. The further information was vouchsafed that it would give the ordinary woman's department, dealing with fashions and frivolities, but would deal with the questions of higher culture and with the interests of the advanced woman generally.

"The Commoner" and THE BOURBON NEWS will be sent to any address one year for $2.50.

Records Of The Past Year.

DURING the past year County Clerk Paton issued 130 licenses to whites, and 153 to colored persons.

There were 67 burials at the Paris cemetery, 10 at the Catholic cemetery and 74 persons were buried in the colored cemetery in 1900.

The Fire department reports thirty fires during the past year.

Two hundred and forty-eight persons were confined in the county jail within the past twelve months.

The number of fines imposed in the last year by Police Judge C. D. Webb were 194.

I have a few good buggies yet on hand which I close out at cost.

JAMES H. HAGGARD.

Paris Bank Dividends.

THE Paris banks have declared semi-annual dividends as follows: Agricultural Bank, 5 per cent; Bourbon Bank, 4 per cent; Deposit Bank, 3 per cent. The Citizens Bank's earnings for the six months were sufficient for the usual 3 per cent., but the directors decided to place the earnings to the credit of the surplus and undivided profits account, which had been exhausted by the heavy payment of back taxes to the city.

Bourbon County Census.

THE census of Paris shows 4,603 inhabitants against 4,218 in 1890 a gain of 385. Bourbon county's population is 18,069 against 16,976 in 1890 a gain of 1093. It must be remembered that the negro suburbs of Claysville and Rockville are not included in the count of Paris, which would add 2000 to 2,500 to our population.

You will not be tortured by the dentist if you use Antiseptaleine.

Young Boy Suicides.

Postoffice Appointment.

THE News is informed by good authority that the appointment for the Paris Postoffice will be made shortly and that the successful candidate will no doubt be Eld. J. S. Sweeney.

Live Bird Shoot.

One of the most successful live bird shoots of the season was given Tuesday by Crawford & Elgin at the Blue Grass Gun Club's grounds. Among the visitors present were: Earl Sellers and "Bill Nye," of Lexington; J. S. Rogers, J. W. Osborn, Betz, of Georgetown. Among the best scores noted were James 31 out of 33, Rogers 49 out of 50, Frank Bedford 40 out of 44, "Bill Nye" did nice work with his "King Smokeless," and Sellers and Ward also made good scores.

The match shoot on Wednesday at 15 live birds between C. Hamilton, S. Clay, B. Clay, B. Steele and A. Crawford was won by the latter, killing 13 out of 15.

WHEN you go to a barber shop you go to get your hair cut or to get shaved—not to be talked to death. My shop is the place to come. I also have three warm bath rooms attached to my shop.

ACCEPT OUR THANKS—

We can not neglect the duty we owe to the citizens of Bourbon and surrounding counties—a duty it gives us pleasure to fulfill, namely, the giving of thanks to them for the continuous and ever increasing support, a support without which it would be impossible for us to prosper. In the past we have done all we could to command success and if the public will continue to give us their support, we promise with every increase of patronage, a corresponding lowering of prices. Our only wish is for our business to meet us a comfortable living. We firmly believe that the volume of our trade this coming season will reach that point in magnitude where we shall be justified in selling all goods at lower average profit than ever before. It all depends on your patronage. Will you give it? We hope you will. So wishing you a prosperous year in 1901, we are respectfully and thankfully, your obedient servants.

If you cannot read this small print at a distance of 14 inches eyes eyesight is failing and should have immediate attention:

Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses always perfectly centered and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of greatest durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr. C. H. Bowen, a trained optician, they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them. You will get poorly adjusted spectacles or poor, imperfect lenses, and are better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Any Imperial spectacles of a reliable, skillful, dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Next visit—Thursday, Jan. 10, 1901. Hello, 170.

HIRAM'S FAMILY TREE.

I recollect when I wuz young
I clum an apple tree,
An' all ter once a lim' cracked off
An' fell, ker smack! with me.
One min' it wuz feelin' smart
Away up in the air;
The nex', I dropped, I swan! I felt Right foolish lyin' there.

Well, when Hiram's cousin Tom,
Down York way, struck it rich,
An' went an' wed a city gal
With ancestors an' sich, Hiram sez: "Dum blaze my hide!
Her folks can't outdo me;
Ef they kin sport a coat o' arms
I'll hev a family tree!"

So Hiram he begun ter climb
An' sort o' raise the dead
A-nosh' round in dockments
An' graveyards, "fer," he said,
"The't's where a feller's got ter hunt
Ter find his pedigree;
They're sort o' branches that you use
Ter climb yer family tree."

The more the Hiram hunted out
O' them dead kin o' his
The more Hiram's notion o' the wuth
O' Hiram Muggins riz;
An' when he found that his great-great-Grand'dad hed crossed the sea
In seventeen-ten, he sot an' crowed,
Up in his family tree.

It galled me some ter see his airs,
But all I sez was: "Hi,
I reckon she's a good stout tree,
But don't you climb too high."
But Hiram sez: "Shucks! These I've found
Ain't none o' high degree,
I've got an idee there's a king
A-top my family tree."

Well, he he writ ter England where
His granddad's granddad's pa
Hed lived, an' when his letter went
He most talked off his jaw,
A-tellin' us poor common folks
How happy he wud be
When he got word some earl or duke
Wuz on his family tree.

Hi he hed clum-plum out o' sight
An' then there come one day
A letter, an' et sez: "We've looked
An' we regret ter say
That Obadiah Muggins wuz,
In sixteen ninety-three,
A-caught a-certain money
A-hung up on Tyburn tree."

So that's how come that Hiram is So meek an' lowly now;
Becuz he kep' a clim'in'
Till he struck a rotten bough.
An' fell so hard et mashed him flat;
The't's why et seems ter me
Et's risky fer us common folks
Ter climb a family tree.

THE HOODWINKING OF FERNANDO

By Mrs. L. M. Terry.

WHEN rich old Don Antonio Jesus Maria del Valle, the wealthiest mine owner in Morelos, reluctantly departed this life, being assisted thereto by most of the physicians in the state, and all the prominent bishops and priests, his only child and heiress, pretty Ynez, was left to the guardianship of her aunt, grim Dona Antonia.

Heartbroken as she was at being thus left an orphan, for her pretty American mother had died years before, Ynez felt that being thus left to the tender mercies of her aunt was the unkindest cut of all. Everyone else thought so, too; everyone, from John Ward down, pitied the girl, and so for that matter would you, did you happen to have the extreme ill-luck of knowing that belligerent dame, Dona Antonia del Valle.

Tall and masculine in port, heavily mustached, as regards face, and made up, as to mental powers, of a combination of three parts utter intolerance and another part fanaticism and bigotry, Dona Antonia knew two ruling passions, an intense love of money, and an overpowering hatred of Americans. Had you given the dona her choice between going to hell and consorting there with the devil and his tribe, or to America and the Americans, she would have cheerfully selected the former sulphurous place. People said there was a reason for the old woman's detestation for foreigners. As a very young and beautiful girl, she had been engaged to, and deeply in love with, a young lieutenant. He was killed afterward in that very unequal and unjust war between Mexico and America. The shock of his death had left Dona Antonia a totally different woman, and her love for Lieutenant Coronado had straightway changed into a terrible hatred toward the nation at whose door her lover's death lay.

Such being the case, imagine Dona Antonia's feelings when her only brother took unto himself as wife a pretty, fair-haired American woman. She neither forgave nor spoke to the couple during the short years of their married life, though living in the same town with them. Only upon the death of her sister-in-law did Dona Antonia condescend to even notice her brother, and only when he lay upon his dying bed did she so far unbend as to enter his house. Once there, however, so effectively did she work upon his feelings as to induce him to appoint her Ynez's sole guardian. Not that Dona Antonia loved the daughter of the American woman—far from it. She merely wished to direct the life and fate of the girl, who, after all, was a Del Valle and the last of her name. "There will be no more hated Americans now," thought the dona, grimly. She would see to it that the last of the Del Valles made a fitting marriage with one of her own class and race, an old man—un hombre serio—preferably. As for that vile gringo at the "Mina de Buena Vista" (for so did she designate John Ward, manager of the Buena Vista mine), she would far rather see Ynez dead or in a convent than married to the American.

Which you will agree was certainly hard lines on poor Ynez, who had received a half American education, and was at heart far more American than Mexican. Also it was hard on young Ward, who had never loved before he met the Mexican miner's lovely daughter, and who therefore had all the harder attack. Neither of the young people was very tractable, nor inclined to give in to the bigoted old woman, whose only objection to Ward was that he belonged to the race she hated. For they continued to meet, as of yore, while Dona Antonia was settling several of her departed brother's affairs. When she discovered that the two were still seeing each other daily, in spite of her commands to the contrary, her rage was something terrible. Young Ward was forbidden the house, and poor Ynez, struggling and in tears, was forcibly dragged to her room, where she was kept captive on bread and water until her better senses returned, and she gave her oath to see no more of the gringo, and to marry, instead, the husband selected for her by her Aunt Antonia.

This latter dignity had been fixed upon by the overbearing aunt, and if anything more could have been possible for the discomfiture of hapless Ynez, this choice would have settled it. For Don Fernando Casanueva, a dyed-in-the-wool old reprobate, owned to at least 60 years of age. He had been twice married, both luckless spouses dying from the pure misery of being wived to him. A life of absolute profligacy had left him a wreck, both morally and physically, and, worst of all, he was really desperately in love with the pretty heiress of his old companion. So ugly, yellow and wrinkled was he that even Dona Antonia, perforce had to admit that Fernando was not very good looking; but, after all, women did not marry for that. Rather should a modest, sensible muchacha select for her husband and the guardian of her fortune an experienced man of certain age. Was not "el buen Fernando" a devoted Romanist, who weekly confessed to no less a person than the bishop himself? Was he not of noble birth, own cousin to the great house of Del Valle? Was he not said to have great influence with the president himself, and was he not worth at least half a million pesos? All these things being true, what more, in the name of Dios and the Virgin, could any woman desire or expect? And, at any rate, willing or not, her niece, la senorita Ynez del Valle, might as well make up her mind to marry Don Fernando Casanueva or betake herself to a nunnery.

Tears, prayers, expostulations—nothing, in fact—had any effect on the hard-hearted aunt. No, there was not another word to be said. Her niece would marry according to her guardian's desire, or enter a convent. Meanwhile, until a choice was made, confinement in her room, on a very slim diet, would be in order. So, as Senorita de Valle could not and would not hear reason, or be guided thereby, in her room did she remain for several days, weeping a great deal, and storming at her implacable aunt a great deal more. For Senorita Ynez had a good, hot temper, and a strong American will of her own, and she was determined that only by force would she be dragged to the altar with old Casanueva.

Her room, locked and barred as to doors, and grated as to windows, was on the second floor, and even if her balconies were so strongly grated that she could not escape through them, small notes to John—her John—could. Wherefore many billet-doux fluttered down by night to the raging lover beneath, and the situation, in all its exasperating hopelessness, was laid before him. What was to be done?

One unfortunate night, however, Senorita Ynez was discovered in the very act of letting down a note to her gringo lover—she had first drawn up one from him on a cord which they used for the purpose. Of this letter, Dona Antonia knew nothing; enough to realize that this shameless, American-hearted girl had once more defied and gotten the best of her. Wild and furious were the words of dona, who swore that her niece, since she would not consent to marriage with that good caballero, Don Fernando, should be sent without delay to a nunnery which she had in view—a place where shameless girls were soon brought to a realizing sense of their own thanklessness and wickedness, where, above all, there would be no fortune-seeking gringos hanging around.

Dona Antonia's tirade necessarily interrupted, on account of a momentary lack of breath, gave her niece an opportunity to put in a few calm and contemptuous words: "It is not necessary, my aunt. For I have decided already to accept Don Fernando. This prison life is no longer endurable."

For a time, Dona Antonia could hardly believe her ears. Was it possible that the girl could mean what she said? After all her objections, was she at last consenting, and in good faith, to marry Don Fernando? As a realization of what it meant—for her dead brother's fortune was strictly tied up in the hands of the executors, and Don Fernando had offered a good sum in cash for Ynez's consent to his suit—came over the dona, she could have wept with relief.

All the same she was careful to let Ynez know that until her marriage day itself was over with, she would be strictly watched and guarded. There was to be, as she expressed it, no gringo-like games played, no deceiving of Don Fernando. Therefore it behooved the senorita to be particularly circumspect.

So that Ynez, being off with the old love could now afford to be on with the new. And the enraptured old Fernando lost no time in "playing the bear" to his pretty young innamorata, who, even as her aunt had threatened, was as strictly looked after and guarded as ever. Every afternoon, at the time of the Angelus, the old don would appear tottering up the street, his servants accompanying him so as to direct the half-blind suitor to the right house. Then, this naturally somewhat weighty matter settled, the servant would retire, leaving Don Fernando to his own devices.

Anyone who knows Mexico will remember that very quaint custom of Mexican lovers—"playing the bear." In her balcony stands the adored, half or wholly sheltered by vines or curtains, while below in the street, on the pavement directly under her or across from her (according to circumstances), paces one adorer. No word is spoken. She stands in the shadow, moving or fluttering a handkerchief occasionally, her face hidden by her lace mantilla, while the don below, pacing up and down, gazes upward with amorous mien, saying more with his eyes, perhaps, than he could with his tongue had he the chance.

In this manner did rheumatic old Don Fernando disport himself, evening after evening, until his poor old bones must have creaked, and his poor stiff old neck must have had innumerable "cricks" in it. But he kept it up nobly; it would not last very much longer, anyway, and the pleasure of seeing his lady-love on her balcony, motionless in her white gown and black mantilla, was quite enough to repay him. After he got her safely, she should be amply repaid for the long delay and the manner in which she had denied his suit.

Ynez, meanwhile, took things quietly, sewing a little in her own room, and trying on patiently the magnificent trousseau which Dona Antonia was having made for her, and for which Don Fernando—as per the usual Mexican custom—would foot the bills. Some of the Mexican customs are beyond improvement; this is one of them.

To see that her bird did not escape, Dona Antonia kept the room locked invariably, and on the rare occasions that the girl went to mass, escorted her in person, with a guard of two servants. She had dealt with refractory Spanish girls before, but this one was half American; one had to be extraordinarily careful. As time went on, however, the old woman grew a little less cautious. For example, at the hour when Don Fernando appeared to "play bear," and she had seen Ynez safely stationed in the barred balcony, with both doors locked, Dona Antonia would go across the street to have a chocolate and gossip with an old friend of hers. From the place where she sat with her friend she could see the girl's dim form and fluttering draperies out on the balcony, and could watch Don Fernando as he tottered up and down beneath her, now mopping his tired face and now and then casting up amorous glances at his bride-elect above. Knowing full well whom she had to deal with, and even in spite of the fact that the keys of Ynez' room were in her pocket, the dona never removed her eyes from the white figure in the balcony. So long as it was there things were all right.

One day—one fatal day—Dona Antonia left her niece a little earlier than usual, having to see a certain modiste; later, she would go to see her cirony, as usual. Ynez, at the time of her departure, was busily trying a new white gown on a new-fangled American dress form. So occupied was she with her work that she did not even seem to hear her aunt as she withdrew, closing and locking the door, taking the heavy keys in her hand. Three minutes later the girl did hear the heavy Spanish street door swing to below, and knew that she had at least five minutes' respite before Don Fernando arrived on the street below for his "bear-playing" act.

With trembling hands she dragged the white-robed dress form close to the balcony, twisting a heavy black mantilla about the neck and pinning a fluttering handkerchief to the waist. Then, watching carefully, she slid the cleverly made-up form into the very corner of the heavily-grated balcony, pulling down the curtains and vines so as to conceal the fact that the body had no head. For that matter, she knew well that in the gray dusk neither the dim eyes of her aunt across the street nor the bleary ones of old Fernando below the balcony could see more than the white outline of the figure's skirt.

Then she set to work with a file that she had guarded carefully in her bag of bicycle tools. It was a fiesta day; not a servant remained in the great house; her aunt was safe for more than an hour in the house opposite, and down in the street paced Don Fernando, leaning at the dim white figure on the balcony, and thinking fondly of how he would tame the pretty vixen, once she was safely his. Ten minutes' filing did the work; and shortly thereafter Ynez, with her money and jewels hidden safely in a big purse, made a quick flight from the room, down the servants' stairway and out of the back of the house. There, running hurriedly down a back street, she was met by John Ward, who had with him a couple of fleet horses. In half an hour they were "over the border and awa!," and next morning were safely married.

The scene upon Dona Antonia's return I leave you to imagine. The open door and young Ward's file told the story, and she promptly went into violent hysterics. As for Don Fernando, he had an attack of fury when he heard the news that finished his career. And a good riddance of bad rubbish at that, you will doubtless say. —Mrs. L. M. ### SPECIAL TRAIN FOR GEESE.

Traffic in Birds Reaches Enormous Proportions in European Countries.

The domestic goose holds about the same honored place in the nutritive economy of Germany that the more delicately flavored and patrician turkey does in that of the United States. It is the standard of luxury of the German people, and during nine months of the year forms the principal feature of the table at festive as well as everyday entertainment, says the St. Louis Republic.

Although every German village has its flock of geese, and notwithstanding the great numbers that are bred and fattened at farms along the banks of rivers, ponds and small lakes, the home-grown supply falls far short of the constant demand, leaving a large annual deficit to be filled by importations, which come mainly from Russia. The season for this traffic is now at its highest, and the receipts of Russian geese at the Rummelsburg station, in the southeastern quarter of Berlin, average about 15,000 daily. A special goose train of from 15 cars on ordinary days to 35 or 40 on Mondays, brings the birds from the Russian frontier. The cars are specially built and rigged for this service and carry each about 1,200 geese.

Immediately after their arrival the whole train load is inspected by a corps of sanitary officials. The fat ones are then distributed among the dealers and marketmen, while the others—and these include the vast majority—are sent to be fattened at farms and feeding establishments in the outlying provinces.

The inspection is exceedingly rigid. If a single goose dies en route or is found sick with any disease that can be communicated to others the whole carload is placed in quarantine for a period of eight days. Should another goose die during this period the whole lot is kept in quarantine eight days longer at a cost of about 2,000 marks ($476), whereby the loss to the owner becomes so enormous that he is driven to the most extreme care and precaution in all future operations of the same kind. This is the real object of the system—to make the penalty of introducing diseased birds so severe as to render such practice ruinous to the perpetrators.

In certain cases, where the evidence of neglect or infectious disease is not conclusive the lot is taken to the city abattoir and killed under supervision of the sanitary police, after which such as are found to be free from disease are released for sale at a special auction held in the central market hall, whence the trade name "auction geese," which applies to those which have been slaughtered under police supervision.

Those which show no trace of disease, but have been unfavorably injured in transit and are otherwise in good condition, are called "bracken," and are sold to certain dealers, who retail them for reduced prices at a special market beside the great market place, where the poorest and most frugal Berliner can find something adapted to his purse.

WASTED POWER.

Plans Formulated Many Years Ago for Using Wasted Gases of Blast Furnaces.

We have in the blast furnace two sources of power at present more or less wasted, namely, the surplus store of gases going to waste in the atmosphere, after the needs of the furnaces have been supplied, and the imperfect utilization of those now burnt under boilers, when power might be generated from them by direct combustion in a gas engine, says the Engineering Magazine. The usual standard of working blast furnaces is about one ton of coke burnt per ton of iron made. From 160,000 to 180,000 cubic feet of high-furnace gases are produced per ton of iron smelted, or per ton of fuel burnt. Assuming that 10,000,000 tons of fuel are burnt annually in blast furnaces in Great Britain, this gives about 2,000,000 horse power wasted, which might be converted into useful work, especially for the production of electric energy. We have only to consider the immense output of pig iron per day from the high furnaces in England, the United States and the continent, to see how vast a store of potential energy is at present untouched.

The successive steps in utilizing blast furnace gases may be thus summarized. Thirty years ago they were considered of no value, and were often burnt off at the mouth of the furnaces. They were next partially used, by retaining a portion to heat the air for the blast and burning a larger proportion under boilers to generate steam for driving the blowing engines. No attempt was made to burn the gases economically, and a considerable quantity was wasted. In 1894 attempts were made in Scotland, at Wishaw, near Glasgow; at Seraing, in Belgium, and at Horde, in Germany, to explode them in an engine cylinder, in the same way as producer gas, instead of under boilers. Complete success attended these pioneer efforts. It was found that, when thus utilized, the quantity required was only one-fifth of that needed when burnt under the old system, and this discovery has been very fruitful of good results, especially in Germany and Belgium, where the subject has till now attracted much more attention than in England.

agree with me, why, you don't have to—only you'll show your usual poor judgment, that's all."

"What's it this time?" asked the smoker, with the air of a man conferring a favor.
"This," said the other, and he exhibited a newspaper in which one item had been marked with a blue pencil.
He read aloud: "Search for missing boy with dogs and lanterns."

"This is the heading of the article," he sputtered. "I've heard of a good many different kinds of boy, but right now I don't seem to recall the boy with dog and lantern attachments.
It's a new one on me. I suppose the man who wrote that intended to convey the impression that dogs and lanterns were being used in a search for a missing boy. If you read the article through that is the idea that you gather. But you'd never guess it from a mere glance at the headlines."
"You're all right," said the man with the fat cigar. "You're all right, you are. You have your troubles. But you don't have to worry over a break like that every day. You get it once in awhile in the best, or nearly the best, regulated newspapers. But it isn't a frequent thing. You'll get over it, my boy. But my case is different.
I have to put up with this sort of thing every day of my life—that is, every working day. I'm getting pretty tired of it, too. I walk down to my office every morning and I walk back to my house every evening—some evenings. Now and then I drop in for a little session of the executive committee of the Society for the Prevention of the Consumption of Water, and then I ride home. Other days I take the air and the exercise. Half way between my flat and the office I am confronted with this horrible sign:

"LAMENESS A SPECIALTY."

"Now, you might think the man who hangs out that sign is a chronic sufferer from lameness. You might think it was on tap and all you had to do to get what you wanted of it would be to ring the bell and walk in.
You might think that lameness was supplied at reduced rates to families.
You might think a lot of things, but the fact is the man who is responsible for the sign is a blacksmith, and the board hangs outside his shop. It leans evilly at me every time I pass it, and some of these days I'm going to do it a mischief. I suppose the blacksmith desires people to know that he makes a specialty of curing, or at least treating, lameness in horses. But he does the best he can to conceal his meaning."

A PERPENDICULAR TRAVELER

St. Louisian Who Covers Over 5,000 Miles Every Year and Never Leaves One Spot.

Think of traveling approximately 5,105 miles a year and yet not moving out of your tracks, so to speak, says the St. Louis Republic.

Impossible?
It may be verified by asking some of the elevator operators in any of the large office buildings of St. Louis. Take the Union Trust building for an illustration, and the figures presented are interesting. L. B. Spencer, the starter, has them down very pat. In speaking of the total distance covered each year by the six cages under his charge,
he said:

"Our average working time is nine hours a day. We run one elevator on Sunday, so, to get a fair average, I should say that each elevator has 312 working days. It is really more than this, but I want to be on the safe side,
so I will make a low estimate.

"The speed of the elevators under full pressure is 200 feet every 14 seconds. Of course the cages do not make this speed, for they have to make many stops each trip, but it is the time that they could make if there were none.

"I will take only one elevator to show my figures. It is required to make a round trip every 2 1/2 minutes, or two of them every five minutes. This gives us a better basis to figure on, for if the cage travels 800 feet in five minutes, we have 9,600 feet for one hour, and since there are nine hours in the day's work, the total is 86,400 feet, or over 16 miles a day. The way I get the figures to make my calculations on is by taking the distance from the ground to the sixteenth floor of the building, which is 200 feet.

"Since each cage works steadily for 312 days, there is a grand total of 26, 956,800 feet for the year. Reducing this to miles we have, in round numbers, 5,105 miles, and since we operate six cages, the total is 30,630 miles. It is something to think over. The distance is sufficient to belt the globe and go nearly one-fourth of the way round again."

Materials for Hats.

The silk plush out of which hats are made comes almost exclusively from France, all attempts to produce it in the United States having ended in failure. Nine-tenths of the felt hats worn in America are made from the fur of the rabbit and hare.—Chicago Chronicle.

BLUSHES IN THE SHOWERS.

A Small Florida Tree That Turns a Beautiful Crimson When the Rain Falls on It.

"Among the many wonders of those strange swamps there is nothing more surprising than the blushing tree," said Albert F. Dewey, of Punta Gorda, Fla., who, according to a local exchange, recently passed a month in the everglades of Florida.

"The blushing tree," continued Mr.
Dewey, "is by no means common. It is found only in the densest thickets of those interminable marshes, whose luxuriant vegetation is a revelation to explorers. It is called the blushing tree by those who know it because it actually blushes when the rain falls upon it. The phenomenon is apparently incomprehensible. It never fails to astound those who see it for the first time. The mysterious and beautiful glow of color which it assumes in a rainstorm baffles description. The Seminole Indians, who once ruled Florida, have always known of the tree, and in their music language, now fast disappearing, have words which mean 'the maiden tree, which reddens at the coming of her lover, the rain.'

"In company with a taciturn Indian guide I journeyed 40 miles to see this marvelous bit of vegetable life. I could scarcely believe the story he told me, yet curiosity at length overcame incredulity, and we set forth one morning in a small canoe. We spent nearly three days paddling and polling our way over the winding waters. In the afternoon of the third day I began to wonder if he had only been deceiving me for the sake of the boat hire and his pay as guide, when he gave a grunt of satisfaction and pointed to the right.

"Distrustfully I followed him ashore and through the underbrush. Beneath great cypress trees, hoary with the gray hanging moss, and past immense bay trees we wended our way inland.
Eagerly he led the way until reaching the edge of a little open space he stopped, and with silent pride pointed toward the center. Gracefully a tree with broad, banana-like leaves reared itself aloft. Widespread branches hung down, slightly waving in the warm breeze. Its emerald-hued foliage was the most beautiful I had ever beheld. It rose to a height of 20 feet and its thick, substantial trunk indicated many years of existence.
This, the old Seminole informed me,
was 'the blushing tree.'

"I told him to prepare to camp here until it rained, regardless of time. We unrolled our blankets, stretched our mosquito bars, without which one cannot sleep in the glades, cooked supper and rolled up in our blankets for the night. That night, the day following and the next night passed without rain.

"I began to think it would never rain, when about noon a cloud darkened the sky overhead. I put a rubber poncho over my shoulders and fixed my eyes on the green and pretty tree a dozen yards away. It was covered with a greenish insect, the size of a large woodtick, which intensified its color. The rain began to fall in torrents, after its custom in that region. Beside me, grinning confidently, with a pipe in his mouth, stood the Seminole.

"As the cool water drenched the tree
I was amazed to note a changing of color. Gradually, yet unmistakably, the green hue was giving way to pink.
The Indian had told the truth. The tree was blushing at the rain.

"In a few minutes the green had faded from sight. Only in a few half-hidden spots beneath broad branches and on its trunk was there a large tint of green to be seen. The tree was as pink as the cheek of a healthy girl.

"After an hour or more the shower passed over, and I watched with no less interest the wonderful tree assume its familiar green once more.
As it was changing back to emerald
I suddenly realized the secret of the phenomenon. The tiny insects and not the tree itself changed color.
These peculiar parasites are possessed of the power of chameleons. In the bright warm sunshine they are greener than the tree on which they live, but when the chilly rain falls upon them they contract their little backs and become a pretty pink in color.
Millions of them thus change the tint of the tree. They are found only upon one species of trees which grow in certain portions of the everglades."

Spread of the Coffee Tree.

Some interesting facts regarding the coffee tree have been printed recently. The native home of this plant is said to be Kaffra, in southern Abyssinia. It was not until it had been in use for centuries by the Arabians that a plant was carried to Java. In 1706 a tree from Java was sent to Amsterdam, and when it flowered and ripened seeds a young seedling was presented to Louis XIV. From this plant seedlings were sent to Martinique, and from these plants again seedlings were sent to Jamaica, Cayenne and San Domingo; while from Amsterdam plants were sent to Surinam. In fact, it was from the one plant, sent from Java in the beginning of the eighteenth century by Governor General Van Hoorn, that everything in the French possessions and West Indies sprang. In this way have traveled the progeny of the original coffee plant, introduced from Arabia at the end of the seventeenth century.—Chicago Chronicle.

VICE REWARDED.

The Oracular Passenger Gives the Conductor a Tip and Gets Left Himself.

"The man who gave me that," said the conductor to the tip passenger in the car,
"must have thought I was a chump."
The passenger examined the lead five-cent piece with a smile, says Puck.
"You're stuck," he said, oracularly. "Unless," he added, unscrupulously, "you can pass it off."
"I wouldn't do that," returned the conductor, polishing the bogus coin on his coat sleeve. "Besides, no one would take it."
"Not alone, but you might slip it in among two or three good ones," suggested the passenger.

The conductor shook his head virtuously,
as the car began to fill up.
An hour later the ex-passenger fished up some small change to buy a cigar, and the first thing he saw was a lead five-cent piece.
"I gave him a quarter," he mused, "and he gave me four nickels in change. The man," he added, still musing, "who gave me that, must have thought I was a chump."

The Twentieth Century.

We now stand at the threshold of the twentieth century, and the nineteenth is a thing of the past. It will, however, be known as a century of invention and discovery, and among some of the greatest of these,
we can truthfully mention Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the celebrated remedy for all ailments arising from a weak or disordered stomach, such as dyspepsia, indigestion, flat-ulency, constipation and biliousness.

Berils of Civilization.

If we are driven to the hard labor of opening oysters for the sake of avoiding preservative and to milking cows to keep clear of formaldehyde it is evident that the highest civilization has not lightened our burdens, but rather added to them. By the way, embalmed beef has gone out of fashion,
hasn't it?—Detroit Free Press.

THE DISCOVERER OF
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
The Great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement.

No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles or such hosts of grateful friends.

Do not be persuaded that any other medicine is just as good.
Any dealer who asks you to buy something else when you go into his store purposely to buy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has no interest in your case. He is merely trying to sell you something on which he can make a larger profit. He does not care whether you get well or not, so long as he can make a little more money out of your sickness. If he wished you well he would without hesitation hand you the medicine you ask for, and which he knows is the best woman's medicine in the world.

Follow the record of this medicine, and remember that these thousands of cures of women whose letters are constantly printed in this paper were not brought about by "something else," but by
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,
The Great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want—a cure.
Moral—Stick to the medicine that you know is Best.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, do not hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free and helpful.

Contagious Blood Poison

There is no poison so highly contagious, so deceptive and so destructive. Don't be too sure you are cured because all external signs of the disease have disappeared, and the doctor says you are well. Many persons have been dosed with Mercury and Potash for months or years, and pronounced cured—to realize when too late that the disease was only covered up—

Liko Begots Like. driven from the surface to break out again, and to their sorrow and mortification find those nearest and dearest to them have been infected by this loathsome disease, for no other poison is so surely transmitted from parent to child as this. Often a bad case of Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula or severe skin disease, an old sore or ulcer developing in middle life, can be traced to blood poison contracted in early The Sin of the Parent. life, for it remains smoldering in the system forever, unless properly treated and driven out in the beginning. S. S. S. is the only antidote for this peculiar virus, the only remedy known that can overcome it and drive it out of the blood, and it does this so thoroughly and effectually that there is never a return of the disease to embarrass or humiliate you afterwards.

SSS cures Contagious Blood Poison in any and all stages. It contains no mineral to break down your constitution; it is purely vegetable and the only blood purifier known that cleanses the blood and at the same time builds up the general health.

Our little book on contagious blood poison is the most complete and instructive ever issued; it not only tells all about this disease, but also how to cure yourself at home. It is free and should be in the hands of everyone seeking a cure. Send for it.

This season there is a large death rate among children from croup and lung trouble. Prompt action will save the little ones from these terrible diseases. We know of nothing so certain to give instant relief as One Minute Cough Cure. It can also be relied upon in grippe and all throat and lung trouble of adults. Pleasant to take. W. T. Brooks.

Save doctors' bills by giving Foley's Honey and Tar to infants and children in time to prevent pneumonia or croup, which are fatal to so many thousands of babies. Clark & Kenney.

When threatened by pneumonia or any other lung trouble, prompt relief is necessary, as it is dangerous to delay. We would suggest that One Minute Cough Cure be taken as soon as indications of having taken cold are noticed. It cures quickly and its early use prevents consumption. W. T. Brooks.

Persons who suffer from indigestion can not expect to live long because they cannot eat the foods required to nourish the body and the products of the undigested foods they do eat poison the blood. It is important to cure indigestion as soon as possible, and the best method of doing this is to use the preparation known as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It digests what you eat and restores all of the digestive organs to perfect health. W. T. Brooks.

End Of Century Meetings.

AT THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

One of the largest crowds ever in attendance at the Christian Church attended the church meeting Monday night, and the program was accorded close attention.

The papers by Rev. Darius, Miss Thompson, Mrs. E. T. Ingers, Mrs. M. G. Thompson and Miss Ida Danks were excellent in every particular, and the vocal music was up to a high standard.

The members of the church were visited by hundreds at intermission where a bountiful lunch was served to all.

The special feature of the meeting was a success, and the religious features were solemnly impressive.

AT THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

Midnight service, held in the Catholic church, this city, ushering in the Twentieth Century, was undoubtedly one of the grandest events in the history of the church. Promptly at 12 o'clock, the organ pealed forth in grand strains, the Kyrie, followed by the Gloria in Excelsis, sung as never before, inspiring all with a feeling of joy, and, at the same time, reminding the worshippers of the duty of love each owes the Almighty God.

The spacious edifice was taxed far beyond its capacity, over one hundred and fifty persons failing to find seats.

The choir never seemed to be in better voice, and it is not often an audience is regaled by such beautiful singing.

At the close of the service Father Burke very appropriately addressed the congregation on the "Duties of a Christian," and thus ended the Nineteenth and began the Twentieth Century in the Catholic church, this city.

AT METHODIST CHURCH.

At the Memorial Methodist Church the services were heartily enjoyable in the social and devotional features, attended by a good representation of the church membership with a good number of visitors. The devotional exercises were appropriate and impressive.

The old Wesleyan way, with whom "Watch Night" of modern times originated in 1740—was observed, in simplicity of the social and devotional.

The first hour was given to the Epworth League; the second to the social and the hour closing at midnight, with the worship; the audience standing and offering in concert the Lord's Prayer, led by the pastor, as the hour of 12 came; followed by congregational singing of the doxology.

More like a family gathering, the social hour was quietly and pleasantly enjoyed by those present, with a well provided and well served luncheon to all, admirably ordered by the young ladies of the church, the culinary being very efficiently and tastefully provided by Miss Anna Hutchcraft, Miss Lula Smith, and others.

Opening of the devotional at 11 p. m., Mrs. Henry Power sang as solo, "Abide with Me" fast falls the evening,—"as solo with fine expression; accompanied on the organ by Miss Laura Lilliston,—"after which the audience bowed in silent prayer for a time, followed by reading of the 66th Psalm, ending with,—"Thou crownest the year with Thy goodness."

Dr. Pearce's brief address was on the "Origin and Uses of Watch Night,"—a synopsis being requested by the editor of the Kennebecian-Citizen press.

In 1739, among the converts under Rev. John Wesley's ministry in Bristol, England, was one Joseph Rogers. Rogers was one of the roughs of the city, leading and influential in a wicked life. After his conversion, he became equally earnest in righteousness, and on the closing day of December, 1739, informed Mr. Wesley that he would personally spend the closing hours of the year in thanksgiving and supplication, as a memorial of God's mercy and goodness; also inquiring if it might be appropriate for others to join him.

Mr. Wesley, always a careful discernor of events and times, at once endorsed the suggestion of the humble disciple, and henceforth "Watch Night" became an established feature of the Wesleyan way, in the 160 years, that has extended it to the twenty millions of communicants and adherents, found throughout the globe in 1900—with other christian denominations, also joining in the observance. Recounting the advance of the Divine Kingdom, since the Rogers watch night of 1739, allusion was made to the fact that the past 100 years, had made more growth in christianity than the 1800 years that preceded, in the utilities of knowledge, science, invention, commerce, preparing the way of the Kingdom, with the great events of international interests, being overruled and guided to open the barriers of earth to the entrance of the Gospel. The address closed with the appropriate lines of Tennyson—

"Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky,
The flying cloud, the frosty light:
The year is dying in the night;
Ring out, wild bells, and let him die.

Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife;
Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be."

Written in 1750, by Charles Wesley, at 11:15, the world hymn, of the Methodist Watch Night service, was sung by the congregation, and to its original melody—

"Come let us anew our journey pursue,
Roll round with the year,
And never stand still till the Master appear!"— followed by the concert of the Lord's Prayer and the doxology—closing the first Watch Night service held in the new church building.

THE BIG MINSTREL SHOW.

The Gas Sun American Minstrels are scheduled to appear at the Grand Opera House, next Tues'ay night. This company enjoys the distinction of being the best, most refined and complete organization of its kind now traveling. This year the organization is composed of fifty people in their own Pullman palace cars, and among the principals we mention Harry J. Yorkey, New York's favorite comedian and monologist; Marion and Pearl, comedians and dancers; E. W. Chipman, the autocrat of minstrels; The Great Lynch, the world's greatest high wire artist; Lambert and Anderson, operatic vocalists, without question the greatest in their line; The Musical Bells, musical mokes, late of the Primrose & Dockstader Minstrels; Nugent Brothers famous back and wing dancers; Gus Son, in wonderful feats of juggling and balancing, besides a host of singers, dancers and acrobats.

The scenery used by this organization is called a spectacular transformation first part setting and is said to be the most elaborate and costly ever used by a minstrel company. As the curtain goes up you behold a mammoth sun shining with all the splendor of old Sol. While you are gazing in open mouthed wonder, the sun, by some mysterious mechanism, disappears from view and the auditor is face to face with the great spectacular satin first part which excels in beauty and splendor any previous efforts in minstrelsy. After the first part the audience will witness an olio of seven star feature acts which cannot fail to please the most pessimistic dyspeptic.

At noon the entire company will be seen in a grand street pageant and musical carnival, and at 7:30 the two bands and symphony orchestra will disperse sweet music in front of the opera house. The management assures us this will be the will be the minstrel event of the season. Prices for the occasion 25, 35, 50 and 75 cents. Seats on Sale at Brook's Drug Store, Monday morning.

CHICAGO STOCK COMPANY.

The engagement of the Chicago Stock Company at the Grand during the present week has not been the financial success it deserved. The company has a complete outfit of scenery for each play they produce, and the productions are being put on in a very creditable manner. Wednesday night the bill was "Quo Vadis," last night "The Fatal Card," and to night the laughing success "My Uncle From New York." At the matinee to-morrow afternoon the bill will include a laughable one act sketch, an olio of vaudeville, and the very funny comedy, "Daddy Nolan." An attraction of unusual merit is announced in the appearance at the matinee and Saturday night performance of the celebrated Reynolds children, Ruth and Claire. These children are conceded by every one who has seen them to be the leading juvenile artists of the stage today. They created a furor in Lexington this week, where they have been appearing with the Holden Company, and it was only as a special favor to Manager Porter that he was enabled to secure them for this short engagement. Their costumes are the finest and most varied of any juvenile artists. The piano playing of Baby Claire is worth a sacrifice on the part of anyone to hear. Remember at the matinee to-morrow afternoon and to-morrow night.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.
